Multinational programmes written in London - challenges and opportunities

Date: Tuesday 14 November 2017

Time: 1.15pm - 2.00pm

Speaker: Matthew Latham, Head of Captive Programmes, XL Catlin

In this IIL lecture Matthew discussed the current issues for buyers of multinational programmes, including the role of a client's captive insurer as part of the solution. He also gave his thoughts on the role the London Market plays and the possible impact of Brexit. The lecture focussed on the different methods for multinational companies to provide cover for their operations around the world and what factors need to be considered (admitted/non-admitted, good local standard or manuscript wordings, sanctions etc). It also covered how captive insurance companies are used in these programmes, including the benefits a captive can bring and current trends/issues impacting their usage. Finally, he looked at the role of the London Market in the provision of these programmes and considered what the future is, with an eye on the Brexit process.

By the end of this lecture members would have gained an insight into:

- The key issues for buyers of multinational programmes.
- How captives are used in those programmes and what factors are impacting the use of captives.
- How the London Market is positioned and how that might change through the Brexit process.
