

STUART FOX

Director, Flight Operations
IATA

Stuart has more than 30 years of aviation experience, having started flying in the late 1980's. His first few years in aviation were focussed on commercial pilot training before joining a UK low cost airline where he operated several aircraft types as a training captain and pilot examiner. He has held various senior airline and corporate aviation management positions from Head of Training to Director of Flight Operations.

In 2009 Stuart joined the UK Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) where he gained experience in a variety of roles, from a Flight Operations Inspector to a regional manager as well as an advisor to the Department of Civil Aviation in Mauritius.

Prior to joining IATA in 2018, Stuart was the Head of Flight Operations, for the Qatar Civil Aviation Authority.

Academically Stuart holds an MBA in international business and is currently completing his Doctorate in strategic management. He holds a valid EASA Airline Transport Pilots License.
